JOINT BACHELOR OF ARTS DEGREE WITH A MAJOR IN

DISABILITY STUDIES

Overview

Disability Studies provides a critical vehicle to examine the notions and constructions of disability and ableism. Students majoring in Disability Studies will be encouraged to deconstruct historical, political, social, and cultural models of ability and disability. Through their studies, students will enhance their critical thinking skills and social awareness.

“My BA in Disability Studies from UWinnipeg provided me with a solid theoretical understanding of disability issues from a human rights and intersectional perspective. The content covered in lectures and readings was thought-provoking, the discussions in class were dynamic and engaging, and the professors were incredibly knowledgeable and supportive. My studies provided me with the tools to incite my sociological imagination and draw upon feminist and poststructuralist literature to challenge oppressive concepts such as heteronormativity and ableism. I recommend the Disability Studies program to anyone interested in human rights discourse and making society a more inclusive place.”

- Evan Wicklund, Diploma in Disability and Community Support (RRC), BA in Disability Studies (UW), MA Cultural Studies (UW).
