German-Canadian Studies

German-Canadian Studies was established to give students an opportunity to study the history and culture of German-speaking immigrants and their descendants in Canada and around the world.

German-Canadian Studies encompasses approaches from all of the disciplines in the Humanities and Social Sciences, but has been most influenced by History and Literature. In courses and seminars, students seek to understand the worldwide migrations from German-speaking Europe and the multiple migrations of German-speakers from all over the world to Canada.

You will find courses in German-Canadian Studies a useful and informative addition to any liberal arts education. Although it is not a Major, the background it provides will be especially relevant to students interested in the complexities of migration, immigration, and multiculturalism. The courses also prepare students who intend to write MA theses and PhD dissertations in German-Canadian Studies. Students with excellent research and German language skills may have opportunities to conduct historical research.

The courses in German-Canadian Studies are listed within the Department of History. This means that you may focus on, and receive credit for, study in German-Canadian Studies while working toward a Bachelor of Arts degree in History.

SAMPLE COURSES

Canadian Immigration and Settlement, a first-year course, traces the development of modern Canada through immigration. The course examines the provincial and federal policies which determine the immigration and settlement process and explores the social, economic, cultural, and international factors that shape the experiences of immigrants.

Modern History of Refugees: Global and Local Perspectives, This is a second-year course that surveys the history of global refugee movements and settlement since the end of the Second World War and links them to the recent history of refugees in Manitoba. Students learn about refugee movements as well as settlement issues and problems in Africa, Asia, Europe, and the Americas. They study the history of refugees in Manitoba and research local experiences of refugees in Winnipeg.

History of Modern Germany is a second-year course that offers a survey of political, economic, social, and cultural developments in Germany from the time of the Holy Roman Empire to the Berlin Republic. The focus is on developments after the Congress of Vienna including the 1848 Revolution, Bismarck and German unification, Wilhelmine Germany and imperialism, World War I, the Weimar Republic, Hitler and National Socialism, World War II and the Holocaust, the two Germanies in the Cold War, and reunification in 1989/90.

The German-Canadian Presence in Canadian History, a third-year course, explores the European origins of German-speaking immigrants to Canada, their settlement patterns, and their social, political, and economic roles.

History of International Migration: The German Experience is a third-year course which offers a survey of historical and current migration patterns, using the example of German-speaking migrants from the 18th to the 20th century. Students will explore migration processes, different types of migration, and the resulting cross-cultural encounters as well as the interactions of states and minorities.

Topics in the German-Canadian Presence in Canadian History is a fourth-year course in which students undertake research on a variety of specialized subjects relating to the political, social, and economic experiences of German-speaking immigrants to Canada.

German-Canadian Identity–Historical Perspectives is a third-year course that examines questions of ethnic identity, using the example of German-Canadians. While students will develop their individual research projects related to the broader issue of ethnicity, class discussion focuses on the historical presence of German speakers in Canada, their settlement patterns, their relationship to political culture and the German state, and perceptions and self-images of German-Canadians.

Global Migration History is a lecture course that surveys the diversity of worldwide migrations in the modern period. Topics include exploration and conquest; merchants, mercenaries, and missionaries; slavery and unfree migration; imperialism, settlement and labour migrations, and refugees. Concepts discussed include international migration systems; transnational life, culture, and society; diaspora; voluntary and forced migration.

History and Memory (S3) This seminar examines the field of memory studies through a comparative transnational survey (with a focus on Canada, USA, and Germany). Memory studies asks not 'What happened in the past?' but rather: 'How did individuals and groups remember the past?' To answer this question, historians study oral history and other forms of informal communication, formal history education, museums, monuments, film, photography. Students learn about major concepts such as historical consciousness; narrativity; collective memory; public history; culture and politics of history, including "history wars."
