3-Year BA
Honours BA
Minor

INTRODUCTION
Study in the Department of Theatre and Film encompasses the fields of both theatre and filmmaking. Theatrical study includes the full spectrum of the dramatic arts: playwriting; production; stage management; drama in education; design; directing; and the skills and techniques required of the actor. Our filmmaking program covers all areas from writing and directing through to shooting and editing. The programs of study within the Department of Theatre and Film place an equal emphasis on practical and theoretical aspects of study. For our theatre students, practical training is balanced with the study of dramatic literature, history of theatre, and aesthetic and critical theory. In addition to all aspects of practical study, our filmmakers learn the theory and history of film.

The Department of Theatre and Film offers both a 3-Year BA degree (Theatre and Film) and a BA Honours degree (Theatre only). The Honours degree is designed for students who seek advanced, pre-professional training for careers in Acting, Directing, Design, Playwriting, Theatre Production and Stage Management.

Students who graduate with the Bachelor’s degree in Theatre and Film may find employment opportunities in every aspect of the theatre and film worlds, from performance and technical production, directing, crewing, and editing, to general arts administration. A solid background in literature and theory may lead to further studies and teaching opportunities in a university or professional drama or film school. Some graduates establish careers in related work in public service, the professions, and the broadcasting media.

The Department of Theatre and Film participates in the Interdepartmental Minor in Comparative Literature. For eligible courses, please see Comparative Literature in this Calendar.

Education students may use Theatre and Film courses to meet either the teachable major or teachable minor requirement of their Bachelor of Education degree.
