

Nearly 10,000 Manitoba youth and families turn to Macdonald Youth Services every year for healing, hope and better lives. Our community of caring stretches north to Thompson and The Pas, and now includes 34 southern First Nations communities. Together, we provide wraparound services that support strong and resilient youth and families. These include a network of therapeutic foster homes, healing homes, 24-hour youth crisis services, a shelter and mobile crisis units, land-based programs, mental health and addictions services, and programs that help young adults navigate life on their own.

Our work:

- We provide safe spaces and support to improve physical, emotional and mental health and wellness for youth, their families and caregivers.
- We create opportunities for youth and families to learn Indigenous culture, tradition and ceremony – vital factors in their healing journey.
- We work with youth and families to strengthen safe, caring, collaborative and respectful relationships.
- We prepare and equip youth to be independent and responsible adults by helping develop their skills for life and goals for work and school.
