

FACULTY OF ARTS

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Political Science is the systematic study of power, authority and governance that helps us understand and engage in the important processes and institutions that structure our lives.

The Political Science Department offers a wide range of courses that consider such issues as: relations between nation-states; the movement, cooperation and interactions of groups of people across state borders; the interactions between state and society; the nature of power and authority; and the impact of such things as political parties, interest groups, social classes and other societal organizations.

This program leads to a Bachelor of Arts (3-year, 4-year, or Honours) with a Major in Political Science. We also offer a Certificate in Public Policy & Administration. Students taking an undergraduate degree in another Major may choose to add a Minor in Political Science as a secondary area of interest.

SAMPLE CAREERS

Political Science graduates work in the municipal, provincial, and federal government, as research and policy analysts, senior bureaucrats, members of diplomatic and foreign services, customs officers, employment insurance officers, police officers, social workers, community activists, electoral returning officers, program managers, project officers, and communications officers. Some graduates work in legal firms, public opinion research companies, the media, labour unions, and non-governmental organizations (NGOs).

SAMPLE COURSES

Introduction to Political Science is a first-year course that presents a systematic study of government and politics, aimed at providing students with some of the conceptual, theoretical and methodological tools needed to explain and understand political phenomena.

Global Politics, a second-year course, studies the use and distribution of national power at the international level, the shifts of that distribution in world politics and the causes and consequences of such shifts.

Politics and Film is a second-year course that allows students to see films, not simply as entertainment, but as complex cultural creations that embody political and social meaning.

Public Administration is a second-year course that begins with organization theories and proceeds to such areas as leadership, decision making, policy planning, and budgeting. It will also examine the relationship between public administration and politics.
