GENERAL INFORMATION

FIRST YEAR COURSES

The Department of Rhetoric, Writing, and Communications offers a range of first-year courses designed to give students an opportunity to develop their abilities as writers in an academic community. All of these courses teach rhetorical and compositional skills essential to effective writing, but the content and focus vary from section to section. Please read the following descriptions carefully to determine which general category of Academic Writing course best suits your needs and interests, and then consult the specific course descriptions in this Handbook.

Meeting the University Writing Requirement

Students may enroll in a variety of sections of Academic Writing, which is offered in both 3 credit hour and 6 credit hour versions. The 3 credit hour version fulfills the Writing Requirement for most students, but those who decide that they would benefit from an extended course are welcome to enroll in the 6 credit hour version (Academic Writing: Extended). There are also 6 credit hour sections designed for students whose first language is not English (Academic Writing: Extended EAL). Students must satisfy the University Writing Requirement before they complete 42 credit hours.

Course content of Various Sections

The specific content and approach of each section of Academic Writing will vary, to meet the diverse needs and interests of our students. The options available to students taking the 3 credit hour version of Academic Writing fall into three categories:

(Sections further designated BUS, CATEP, FR, WEC or TYP are reserved for particular cohorts of students.)

1) Sections designed to prepare students for major fields of study (Academic Writing in Humanities, Social Sciences, Sciences, and Business and Administration). These sections are designated in WebAdvisor by the following abbreviations:

RHET-1101 Academic Writing: Humanities

RHET-1102 Academic Writing: Social Sci

RHET-1103 Academic Writing: Sciences

RHET-1104 Academic Writing: Bus Admin

- 2) Sections linked to introductory courses in a variety of disciplines (Academic Writing: Links with the Disciplines).

RHET-1106 Academic Writing: Link . . . (no sections offered in 2019-20)

- 3) Sections that take a multidisciplinary rather than a discipline-specific approach are designated in WebAdvisor by the following abbreviation:

RHET-1105 Academic Writing: Multi

These sections offer students a good general approach to academic writing and research which can then be adapted for use in particular disciplines.

- 4) The full-course sections, Academic Writing: Extended, offer students two terms in which to develop their writing to meet the challenges of university. In WebAdvisor these sections are designated:

RHET-1110 Academic Writing: Extended

There are also 6 credit hour sections designated:

RHET-1115 Academic Writing: Ext EAL

Only students whose first language is not English are eligible to register in Academic Writing: Extended EAL (English as an Additional Language) sections.

You are welcome to consult the Department of Rhetoric, Writing, and Communications or an Academic Advisor for assistance in choosing the course and section that would best meet your needs.

MAJORS IN RHETORIC AND COMMUNICATIONS

The Department of Rhetoric, Writing, and Communications offers a 3-Year, 4-Year or Honours BA with a Major in Rhetoric and Communications. These programs emphasize the interpretation, evaluation, production, and precise editing of texts for a range of audiences, media, and purposes. As well as writing in a variety of genres, students in the Major read contemporary non-fiction, analyze visual and verbal arguments, trace the impact of print and electronic media on Western culture, and through the study of theory and close attention to textual practices, examine how ideology imprints itself on discourse.

In addition to core courses offered each year, students may choose from a variety of upper-level courses offered usually every other year.

Lending itself well to a Double or Combined Major, a Rhetoric and Communications degree program prepares students for a wide range of public and private sector careers that depend on advanced analytical and communicative skills, especially in writing. Students with a BA in Rhetoric and Communications can enter graduate studies in such fields as Communications, Composition, Cultural Studies, Media Studies, and Rhetoric.

MINOR IN RHETORIC, WRITING, AND COMMUNICATIONS

Students must complete a 4-year degree program in order to be eligible to hold a Minor.

CERTIFICATE IN WRITING

The Certificate in Writing is a standalone 30-credit-hour program that consists of current course offerings in the Department of Rhetoric, Writing, and Communications, and allows students the flexibility to create a program of study that focuses on elements of written communication, primarily in terms of genre, audience, and textual processes.

Students completing any degree program, non-degree seeking students, and returning graduates are eligible to complete the Certificate. All courses in the Certificate program are also part of the Rhetoric and Communications degree program, and can be used toward a 3-year or 4-year BA in Rhetoric and Communications. (Note that some courses, particularly some electives in English and Theatre and Film, come with prerequisites that do not count toward the Certificate.)

Students must apply to graduate with a Certificate. Application forms are available in the Department office.

JOINT DEGREE/DIPLOMA IN COMMUNICATIONS

The Department of Rhetoric, Writing, and Communications also coordinates a program combining the Red River College two-year Creative Communications Diploma with university credit courses, allowing students to graduate with a BA in Communications. While not a Major, this Degree/Diploma ensures that students receive a well-rounded liberal arts education as well as applied and workplace training, preparing them specifically for careers in Journalism, Public Relations, Advertising, or Broadcast Production.

Students must apply separately to the U of W and to Red River College. Students are required to complete a minimum of 60 credit hours at U of W before beginning their program at Red River. (To complete the degree requirements, students must have a minimum of 72 credit hours at U of W.) Most Creative Communications graduates find work after completing the diploma and may finish any remaining U of W courses part-time. On average, students generally complete the diploma and all U of W courses within about five years.

For more information about Rhetoric, Writing and Communications programs. . .

Please start by reading about the requirements for the Rhetoric, Writing and Communications programs in the University of Winnipeg 2018-2019 General Calendar, available online. As well, this Handbook lists all RHET courses being offered this coming year, and the RHET web site (<http://www.uwinnipeg.ca/rhetoric/>) provides information about requirements and courses offered each year.

We strongly recommend that all prospective students in the Major or the Joint Program make an appointment with the Rhetoric Chair or a Rhetoric faculty member for an advising session before registering for courses. Please call the General Office of the Department of Rhetoric, Writing, and Communications at (204) 258-3865 for information about available faculty advisors.

PUBLIC RELATIONS, MARKETING AND STRATEGIC COMMUNICATION DIPLOMA

(Through Professional, Applied and Continuing Education—PACE)

Public Relations is one of the fastest growing professions in the world. Today's public relations professional plays an important role in helping organizations reach their overall goals and objectives. The Public Relations, Marketing and Strategic Communications Diploma will provide students with the high level of knowledge and the increased skills needed to succeed in this dynamic and expanding profession. For more information, go to <http://pace.uwinnipegcourses.ca/full-time-programs/public-relations-marketing-strategic-communications-diploma> or call (204) 982-6633.

WRITING CENTRE/COMPUTER WRITING LAB

The Department of Rhetoric, Writing, and Communications has a Writing Centre and a Computer Writing Lab that support students in any stage of their writing process, from brainstorming a writing assignment to working with a polished draft. The Writing Centre (3G11) fosters writing excellence for all students in all years of their programs of study, offering free face-to-face and online tutoring, drop-in workshops for students, and classroom presentations about writing to faculty. Peer tutoring is available for students in all disciplines, and the Centre contains a writing resource library for all students to use. The Computer Writing Lab (3G10) has 30 workstations with word processing software and Internet and e-mail access, and lab supervisors are there to assist students with hardware and software problems.

Visit <http://uwinnipeg.ca/writing-centre/> to keep up to date on the services of the Writing Centre, or call to make an appointment at 204-786-9129.

FIRST YEAR COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

Academic Writing: Humanities
RHET-1101, Section 001, Fall Term
MW 2:30-3:45PM

Instructor: Shawn Moi

From personal essays to complex analyses, Academic Writing for the Humanities is structured so that you will learn how to create a visible demonstration of ideas and opinions presented in a framework of academic objectivity. This course helps you to understand and produce the most common university assignments, especially those given in courses such as history, philosophy, literature, and so forth. This course fulfills the University of Winnipeg writing requirement, and is designed to provide you with choices so that you will be able to convey your thoughts in a critical and effective manner.

Academic Writing teaches the essential strategies for university writing and research: the discovery of topics, the arrangement of ideas, the assessment of audience and purpose, and the practice of effective editing. Sections of RHET-

1102 are designed for students likely to major in a discipline in the Social Sciences, such as Politics, Psychology, or Sociology. Assignments may include annotated bibliographies, literature reviews, and ethnographies. Students are introduced to the styles of documenting sources and to the research databases relevant to the Social Sciences. Note: Students may receive credit for only one Academic Writing course at the 1000 level for graduation. Students with standing in the former ENGL-0100(3) Fundamentals of Rhetoric must register in a 3 credit hour version of Academic Writing in order to satisfy the writing requirement.

Academic Writing: Social Sciences
RHET-1102-050, Fall Term

M 6:00-9:00PM

Instructor: Janice Freeman

This section of Academic Writing is designed for students who wish to concentrate on improving their writing abilities through working in digital spaces. Upon completion of this course, students should be able to respond confidently to a variety of university writing assignments and produce university-level essays by following a mature composing process. In addition, students will learn to identify and respond to the rhetorical conditions of writing assignments and adopt an appropriate tone and level of formality. Students will also learn to read and think critically, follow the steps necessary to write a successful research paper, and do research both on-line and in the library.

In this course, readings will be taken from the social sciences; students will explore the writing conventions of social sciences disciplines. Several short assignments will allow students to practice different types of disciplinary writing. Students will have the opportunity to practice effective methods of quoting, paraphrasing, summarizing, synthesizing, and documenting academic writing.

In this section, students will learn how computers and the internet can enhance their research and writing process. Assignments will require students to post messages to a class discussion group and share drafts of their essays with their peers within a secure digital space.

Suggested Course Text: Any recent handbook will be an asset; students find that most professional style and grammar sites contain enough supplementary materials so that they do not need to purchase a new textbook.

Writing in and for the natural sciences comes in many forms and serves many purposes. Scientists write to convey the results of their research within the scientific community, and they also write to communicate with politicians and policy-makers, with industry, and with the public to bring their knowledge to bear on public and individual decision-making. As well, there are many writers who, while they may not be scientists, do important work in communicating science knowledge in a way that allows lay people to learn about the world and to share in important scientific knowledge. These writers perform an important role in bridging the worlds of scientific inquiry and our day-to-day lives. To do this work well, scientists and other science writers alike must understand not only the ideas they are trying to convey, but also the goals they have in presenting those ideas, and the abilities, expectations, and interests of the people with whom they are communicating.

In this course, we will analyse different approaches to writing about science, and we will examine the range of texts that exist about science, from academic articles to scientific reports and popular science writing. You will acquire skills needed to find appropriate research sources, and to create clear, well-written, correctly formatted documents, such as essays, analyses, critiques, summaries, technical descriptions and reports. We will focus on the elements of strong academic writing, including thesis statements, sentence and paragraph structure, argumentation and evidence, and documentation. You will also learn to recognize and correct many mistakes commonly made by science students and writers, and build essential skills to be successful in the first years of your university career and beyond.

Academic Writing teaches the essential strategies for university writing and research: the discovery of topics, the arrangement of ideas, the assessment of audience and purpose, and the practice of effective editing. Taking a case-based approach, this course focuses on the fundamentals of good writing and critical thinking in both academic and institutional settings. Students practice the forms of communication common in business, public administration, and non-profit organizations, such as summaries, reports, proposals, and correspondence. Students learn the styles of documenting sources and to use the research databases relevant to Business and Administration. A large part of this course will focus on learning how to think critically, and part of this process will involve peer-to-peer critique sessions and in-class discussions. We will also examine various written documents, video clips, and other material in order to build your analytical skills, and to expose you to in-class group projects. By the end of term, students will be more effective communicators, researchers, and writers, able to deliver the kind of work expected in both university and business environments. Note: this course meets the University writing requirement.

Instructor: Rhonda May

Sections of RHET-1105 take a multidisciplinary rather than a discipline-specific perspective. The approach taken in each section (for example, the assignments and the styles of documentation) varies. The goal is to help students to become more prepared, confident, and articulate in responding to a range of writing, research, documentation and editing situations. The course will also focus on a variety of formats used to pose arguments and express knowledge, such as the summary, critique, opinion piece, analytical paper, and research essay. You will gain crucial experience and skills, including the ability to:

- assess the writing audience and purpose
- find, research and document sources
- choose meaningful essay topics to support your course requirements and personal interests
- write effective thesis statements
- think critically and create logical arguments
- meaningfully intertwine your thoughts and insights with the thoughts of other scholars
- summarize complex thoughts
- correctly format and structure sentences and paragraphs
- adopt an appropriate tone and level of formality
- recognize and correct common mistakes made by writers

As you become acquainted with the tools needed for effective writing, you will be encouraged to think about how we communicate with one another and how this plays out as both a writer and a reader.

How can writers accurately describe the work and ideas of other scholars in various disciplines without losing the clarity of their own voices? What strategies can writers use to produce smooth, readable texts that guide the reader from sentence to sentence, from paragraph to paragraph, and from idea to idea? Academic Writing: Multidisciplinary, which fulfills the University of Winnipeg writing requirement, will help you to become a more adept writer, by learning how various methods may be applied to a variety of courses at university. Such proficiency is arrived at only by practicing different strategies. In this course you will develop a greater awareness of structure, language, and the writing process as a whole.

RHET-1105, Section 508/510, Fall Term

TuTh 2:30-3:45PM

Instructor: Jennifer Reid

This course is designed to prepare students with the needed academic researching, writing, formatting, and editing skills to be successful in the first years of their university career and beyond. Specifically, you will be acquiring skills needed to choose meaningful essay writing topics to support your classes' requirements and personal interests, to find appropriate research sources, and to create well-written, correctly formatted academic essays that meaningfully intertwine your thoughts, inspirations, and insights with the thoughts and words of other scholars. Additionally, you will gain skills and confidence in the mechanical aspects of writing such as enriching your vocabulary, understanding grammar and the parts of speech to improve your sentence structure and variety, as well as recognizing and correcting many mistakes commonly made by writers.

Intro to Rhetoric, Writing & Communications
RHET- 1120, Section 001, Fall Term

TuTh 4:00—5:15PM

Instructor: Jason Hannan

This course provides an introduction to the study of Rhetoric, Writing, and Communications, and the role that persuasion and persuasive discourse plays in contemporary communication, culture, and society. Students examine topics such as the role of persuasion in everyday communication, the relationship between rhetoric and structures of language, and foundations in rhetorical scholarship, writing studies, and communications. Other topics may include the study of rhetoric in political communication, literacy pedagogy and textuality, religion, the law, and visual rhetoric in art, film, popular culture, advertising, and public relations.

UPPER LEVEL COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

Professional Style and Editing

RHET-2131, Section 001, Fall Term

MW 4:00-5:15PM

Instructor: Robert Byrnes

This course teaches students to revise their prose, not for new ideas but for better phrasing of the ones they already have. Students will learn how to write in several prose styles and to edit each other's work professionally in terms of stylistic (rather than only grammatical) criteria. The course will include a number of short style exercises as well as longer essays, and a great deal of practice in editing. It will be a great help for anyone intending to write polished term papers or theses, not to mention business memos.

Rhetorical Criticism

RHET-2135, Section 001, Fall Term

TuTh 11:30AM-12:45PM

Instructor: Tracy Whalen

Rhetoric has for 2500 years attracted bad press. It's often seen as a synonym for trickery, bombast, lies, or empty words. This course challenges rhetoric's maligned reputation by exploring various definitions of the term as developed by rhetorical theorists. It discusses, with reference to everyday life, the consequential role rhetoric plays in bringing about connection and division between symbol users. Week by week, we apply different rhetorical frameworks to texts that argue against the norm, move us, shape our view of a situation, and ultimately do things. The course examines public address, media events, common metaphors, websites, and powerful social narratives with a view to understanding how symbols encourage, obstruct, and refine agreement—and direct our attitudes and action.

Rhetorical Criticism

RHET-2135, Section 002, Winter Term

TuTh 8:30-9:45AM

Instructor: Shawn Moi

This course is recommended for students whose interests extend beyond the kinds of literature traditionally studied in English courses. The emphasis will be on non-literary texts and on language used to persuade -- on media talk and advertising copy; on political speeches, campaigns, and editorials; on popular and professional essays. For the rhetorical critic, such uses of language are considered worthy of close analysis not because they have lasting aesthetic value, but because they reveal cultural values and social trends. Students in this course will examine a variety of nonfiction in order to develop the perspective of rhetorical criticism, which views language acts as responses to historical circumstances, addressed to particular audiences and motivated by particular goals. Contemporary, written texts will comprise the bulk of the reading in the course, but speeches and pre-modern texts may also be considered. In addition, students will be encouraged to suggest other readings (including magazine and newspaper articles) that are suitable for rhetorical analysis.

Contemporary Communication Theory

RHET-2137, Section 001, Fall Term

TuTh 1:00-2:15PM

Instructor: Matthew Flisfeder

This course introduces students to some of the central theories in contemporary communication studies. It covers a broad range of topics, including: media and ideology; media and public discourse; democracy and the public sphere; the critical political economy of communication; cultural representation and images of inequality in the media; media convergence and contemporary media experiences; and, new media culture and identity.

Rhetoric of Animality
RHET-2142, Section 001, Fall Term
MW 4:00-5:15PM

Instructor: Jason Hannan

This course examines what has come to be known in the humanities as "the question of the animal". It considers how moral discourse in the West has failed to grapple with the physical and metaphysical presence of non-human animals. Students examine how the moral status of animals has been theorized in Western thought. Students interrogate the different tropes used to uphold the human-animal distinction, including the idea that speech, communication, and reason confer a special status upon humanity. Students engage a wide range of writings addressing "the question of the animal". Students taking a Major in Rhetoric and Communications must complete Academic Writing before taking this course.

Oral Communication
RHET-2145, Section 001, Winter Term
TuTh 2:30-3:45PM

Instructor: Tracy Whalen

The goals of this course are threefold: to improve students' presentation skills, to develop their understanding and critical analysis of other presentations, and to address meaningful topics in our world. Students develop their speaking skills (and rhetorical acumen) in very practical ways by addressing different audiences through different communicative forms, including conversation and class discussion, group presentations for an outside panel, and individual three-minute thesis presentations. These activities are informed, always, by rhetorical history and theory and by close consideration of why and how we might speak in the first place—and when, why, and how we might listen as well.

Communication & Pop Culture
RHET-2250, Section 001, Fall Term
MW 2:30-3:45PM

Instructor: Matthew Flisfeder

This course examines the relationship between the rise of new media and discourses used to write about popular culture. The course looks at changing rhetorics of taste, from the nineteenth to the twentieth century, as new media made art and culture more accessible to the public. The course also examines how new processes of mediated distribution of art changed the discursive strategies for writing about popular culture. Course topics include: the rise of photography and the technological reproducibility of images; mass media and the culture industry; technology and globalization; and augmented reality and video games.

Tutoring Writing
RHET-2500, Section 001, Fall/Winter
Tu 8:30-9:45AM

Instructor: Andrew McGillivray

This course is designed to provide the theoretical and practical knowledge students will need to work as a writing tutor in the Department of Rhetoric, Writing, and Communications. The class meets once weekly throughout Fall and Winter terms. Readings in composition theory and in the principles of peer tutoring will introduce students to such topics as the composing process, methods of writing assessment, rhetorical expectations in academic writing, and the ethical responsibilities of tutors in a peer-tutoring relationship. Students enrolled in this course will be expected to be a part of the University of Winnipeg's growing community of tutors by taking part in community-building, “shadow” existing tutors to learn about best practices in peer conferences, and commit to at least five hours of peer tutoring in the fall term.

Rhetorical Grammar

RHET-2530, Section 001, Fall Term

TuTh 4:00-5:15PM

Instructor: Janice Freeman

This course sharpens students’ ability to write and edit efficiently at the sentence and paragraph levels. Through close analysis of examples, students first acquire a vocabulary for discussing grammar, syntax, and error that refines their understanding of English sentence and paragraph structures. With these tools, students can identify structural flaws in prose more precisely and thoroughly and better distinguish between errors and stylistic choices. The relationship between sentences – cohesion, unity, and emphasis – is then considered, and students are briefly introduced to fundamentals of style. Hands-on and peer-centred, this course includes many writing and editing exercises, some completed within class, others assigned as homework. Previous students have said that it supports and complements their understanding of other Rhetoric and language courses and should be considered a prerequisite to such courses as Professional Style and Editing and Rhetorical Criticism.

Modern Rhetorical Theory

RHET-3138, Section 001 Winter Term

MW 4:00-5:15PM

Instructor: Jason Hannan

This course provides an overview of modern rhetorical theory. We will begin with the single greatest figure of rhetoric in the modern era: Kenneth Burke. From there, we will cover several major figures and schools of thought in the twentieth century and beyond. The contemporary themes we will address include power, politics, democracy, science, religion, art, media, and popular culture. Students will learn how to apply the theories learned in class to everyday life. The aim of the course to help students become more critically aware of the complexities of our social and symbolic universe.

Rhetorics of Visual Representation

RHET-3139, Section 001 Winter Term

TuTh 11:30AM-12:45PM

Instructor: Tracy Whalen

One might note a major shift in the field of rhetoric: an increasing amount of the discipline’s attention has become focused on the image and, recently, on its circulation. In this course, we explore the history and domain of visual rhetoric, examining how symbol users prompt identification and agreement in other symbol users through visual forms. This course examines a range of visual artifacts including, but not limited to, scientific illustrations, political images, religious icons, editorial cartoons, art, photographs, maps, memes, and digital forms. Each week we study how images address (entice, repulse, trouble, baffle, bore, distract, or anger) viewers or go without comment, so transparent and commonsensical they seem to be.

Rhetoric of Non-Fiction

RHET-3150, Section 001, Fall Term

TuTh 2:30-3:45PM

Instructor: Robert Byrnes

At least since 1800, it’s been a tricky job to put together a happy, healthy self. In olden days, heroes in literature were mighty personages who founded a nation or went on wild, adventurous quests. Today heroism is internal for the most part, and the epic task confronting the modern personality is to put together a sane psyche in an insane world. As social and religious certainties dissolve, as the family falls apart, the great work of adolescence and young adulthood is to integrate a coherent yet various selfhood; this has come to seem an heroic labour, and perhaps even the work of a lifetime. In what is sometimes loosely called “romantic psychology,” the self is thought to develop by stages, via an indispensable struggle with the world, toward integration, purpose, and self-actualization. This course will look at the way this struggle toward selfhood is metaphorized in autobiography and memoir. The course will involve a great deal of close reading, and both literary and rhetorical approaches as each work invokes them. Class will consist of short lecture presentations and a great deal of class discussion.

TEXTS AND MATERIALS (list may change somewhat before class begins):

- West with the Night, by Beryl Markham
- Woman Warrior, by Maxine Hong Kingston
- White Album, by Joan Didion
- The Bell Jar, by Sylvia Plath

Critical Studies of Discourse & Ideology

RHET-3151, Section 001, Winter Term

MW 2:30-3:45PM

Instructor: Matthew Flisfeder

Critical studies of discourse and ideology enable us to identify the ways that culturally prominent systems of value-laden language produce the forms and limits of probable (and even possible) thoughts and values. For example, patriotic discourses operate to legitimate the power of some groups in our culture, while making it seem equally logical to deny the rights of others. In this course, students learn techniques developed in the fields of rhetoric and communication studies for contributing to social change by recognizing, analyzing, and challenging the terms of discourse and ideology.

Narrative Thinking & Writing

RHET-3255, Section 002, Winter Term

TuTh 1:00-2:15PM

Instructor: Jaqueline McLeod Rogers

Students in this course consider narrative as a way of thinking or mode of knowing, rather than as a method of transcription. They focus on the narrative methodologies of autobiographical criticism and ethnography by examining texts that represent early and recent examples of each. Working with autobiographical criticism, students consider how feminist theory has been instrumental in the development of criticism that foregrounds the connection between self and text. Turning to ethnography, students examine changes in the relationship between observer and field. In addition to considering these issues as readers of narrative, students are asked to write narratives that engage issues requiring analysis and to reflect on how narration both enables and inhibits the development of ideas.

Forms of Inquiry in Written Communication

RHET-3320, Section 001, Fall Term

TuTh 10:00-11:15AM

Instructor: Andrew McGillivray

The disciplinary fields of rhetoric, writing, and communications are still growing and forming, and people conducting research within these fields use a variety of methods to explore research questions and uncover answers to those questions in subject areas such as language, culture, and identity. This course encourages an ethnographic approach to studying how groups communicate, form and express identities, and use technologies. To carry out this work, students have the unique opportunity to conduct research directly with human subjects. The major assignment for the course is a staged research project, for which students conduct initial exploratory investigations on a group of their choice, which is followed by a project proposal and human ethics research training. After the project proposals are approved, students then undertake fieldwork through observation, participation, interviews, and/or the collection of artifacts (physical and/or textual). The final stage of the project includes the writing out of the data collected during research and writing up a final ethnographic study of the group.

Strategies for Technical and Professional Communication

RHET-3340, Section 050, Fall Term

W 6:00-9:00PM

Instructor: Sheila Page

Writing in an organizational setting requires a careful understanding of the individual writer's role in relation to the organization, as well as the organization's mandate and its internal and external audiences. In this course, we will use several theories from the fields of rhetoric, communications, and management to understand the purposes and constraints that shape organizational communications. We will also analyse and practise many of the standard formats used in organizational communications, in both traditional and digital forms.

We will then build on this foundation of theory and practice by analysing a range of occasions for organizational communications and the choices available for responding to those occasions. Throughout the course, you will have opportunities to work individually and in groups to produce organizational documents, to examine issues in organizational communications through oral presentations and analytical essays, and to engage in the type of peer response and revision that is fundamental to good communications practices within organizations.

Critical Studies of Social Media

RHET-3450, Section 001, Winter Term

TuTh 10:00-11:15AM

Instructor: Matthew Flisfeder

Social media and social networking websites structure many of our experiences of the world, ourselves, and the culture that surrounds us. This course takes a critical, cultural, and rhetorical approach to the study of social media. Topics include the rhetoric of the public profile and persuasive constructions of social media selfhood and identity curation; the language and meaning of social media "friendship" and "publicity;" questions about the rhetoric of privacy under conditions of constant surveillance; the relationship between discourse, algorithms, and platform logics; and the role of social media in framing the world of meaning and public discourse.
