History

Note: HIST-4801-001 - Course Description: This seminar explores 'nature' and 'climate' as genres, themes, mediums, and politics of art. This course seeks to understand the use of nature in art as bound to complicated entanglements of property and power, economic, urban and industrial development, and the violence of colonial ambitions. To this course, I will bring my own curatorial research into the topic ranging from Renaissance 'naturalism', to 19th century 'picturesque' traditions, to 20th century 'land art', to contemporary artistic interventions into the Anthropocene. Students will engage their own inquiries and give presentations on their results with a view towards creating digital exhibition projects of their own.
