After discovering case files from a 1950s gender clinic, a cast of trans actors turn a talk show inside out to confront the legacy of a young trans woman forced to choose between honesty and access.

Agnes, the pioneering, pseudonymized, transgender woman who participated in Harold Garfinkel's gender health research at UCLA in the 1960s, has long stood as a figurehead of trans history. In this rigorous cinematic exercise that blends fiction and nonfiction, director Chase Joynt explores where and how her platform has become a pigeonhole. Framing Agnes endeavors to widen the frame through which trans history is viewed – one that has remained too narrow to capture the multiplicity of experiences eclipsed by Agnes'. Through a collaborative practice of reimagination, an impressive lineup of trans stars (Zackary Drucker, Angelica Ross, Jen Richards, Max Wolf Valerio, Silas Howard, and Stephen Ira) take on vividly rendered, impeccably vintage reenactments, bringing to life groundbreaking artifacts of trans healthcare.

Joynt's signature form-rupturing style radically reenvisioned the imposition of the frame on the cultural memory of transness through his brilliantly crafted, communally-driven excavation. This reclamation tears away with remarkable precision the myth of isolation as the mode of existence of transgender history-makers, breathing new life into a lineage of collaborators and conspirators who have been forgotten for far too long.

Following the screening will be a live Q&A session with director Chase Joynt and cast member Jules Gill-Peterson.

Supporting 2SLGBTQ+ Students in our Schools and Libraries will be an Education roundtable talk that will cover a blend of voices and perspectives.

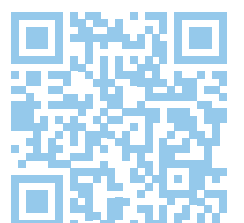

The discussion will be organized into two distinct sections. The first section will concentrate on public schools, where teachers, parents, and school librarians will share their valuable insights and experiences. The second section will pivot to explore the vital role of public libraries in supporting 2SLGBTQ+ students.

There will be a moderated Q&A session at the end of the roundtable to close the event. Together, we aim to foster a more inclusive and welcoming educational landscape for all.
